A columnar formation of colored water appears on campus after it has rained, an event that brings joy to students. The phenomenon, known as a circumzenithal arc, occurs when sunlight refracts through raindrops at a particular angle. This条件下, light is bent and dispersed, creating a rainbow-like effect. The arc is often seen near the zenith, or the point directly overhead, and can be a stunning sight for those who happen to be on campus when it occurs.

The campus community often takes photos and shares them on social media, capturing the beauty of nature and the unique experiences it brings. This event is a reminder of the importance of stopping to appreciate the beauty around us, even in the midst of daily routines. It’s a brief moment of connection with nature, a moment that can lift our spirits and bring a smile to our faces.

California Tech, To the President,

There have been some basic assumptions recently regarding the issues that exist between the university and the students. It has been generally assumed that the conflict is between Capitalism and Communism. Actually, the real issue is between democracy and totalitarianism. The real issue is political rather than economic.

We must realize that there is a great danger that is trying to oppress "Communism" we must have to create a comptency to totalitarian government in our own country, and thus destroy our civil liberties. The government must now justify a reason why it is so friendly to the Red Bureaucrats.

Mystery Man
There are many more who have signed and returned their contracts to Mr. Munsman and have drawn suits. But the big mystery is "Who is the undiscovered speedball artist who will take the round come May 27?" The Rehearsal shut up like a chain, which I might say will rather end of the ordinary, when I proposed him for hints on the grey hope of the faculty's.
